

Farm Information Boards

This project was to create information boards to be displayed around the on-site tearooms to educate the public about general farming practices, the history of the family farm, and the wildlife surrounding the farm. Boards were also created for the on-site teaching classroom where local primary school children attend to learn about agriculture.

The general public, and the next generation, are the biggest contributors to the National Landscape and education is vital to encourage custodianship towards our local habitats, wildlife and community.
